二. 題組。

When you were little, did you have a little strange friend? One that had a funny color and shape or could hide in your pocket? Did you have a friend that was totally imaginary?

If you did, you are one of the most people. People used to believe that imaginary friends are not usual, but one study in the US found that almost two-thirds of seven-year-olds had an imaginary friend at some point. Another study in the UK on the group of 1,800 children showed that 46% of them had an imaginary friend now or in the past, even 9% of 12-year-olds!

While parents might be worried to hear their children talking to themselves, imaginary friends don't appear to be bad at all. As a matter of fact, some studies show that having imaginary friends helps children develop speaking and social skills. These social skills can help children make more real friends. Imaginary friends help children practice social situations, like standing up to bullies or show difficult feelings. They also give children a chance, for once, to tell someone else what to do.

Imaginary friends aren't a red flag at all. In fact, they appear to be very positive importance. Perhaps parents will start hoping their children spend a few years talking to thin air.

imaginary 想像的; develop 發展; social 社交的; situation 處境; positive 正面的

45. What is the main topic of the reading?
 (A) The dangers of imaginary friends.
 (B) Changes in our thinking about imaginary friends.

46. What might a red flag mean in the reading?
 (A) Something good.
 (B) Something bad.
 (C) Something imaginary.
 (D) Something important.
47. In the reading mentions(提及) standing up to bullies. What does "stand up to someone" mean?
 (A) To be near someone.
 (B) To stand in front of someone to block him or her.
 (C) To be someone's friend.
 (D) To fight with someone or something.

We live in a world full of all the colors of the rainbow. However, some people are given up the pleasure of seeing them because they are color-blind. With common color blindness, people are not able to take some colors in, but totally color-blind people can see only shades of black, white and gray.

The condition is seldom seen, about one in every 40,000 people. Those who are affected are easily sensitive to bright light, so they often wear sunglasses when going out. Their everyday lives also become difficult because of the poor eyesight, especially when cooking, as they cannot tell whether meat is cooked or not.

However, being totally color-blind isn't totally a bad and sad thing. Color-blind people all have excellent night vision because they often wear sunglasses to block the light. Also, people who are totally color-blind may have very good memories. This is because, not being able to be sure of their eyes, they have a greater need to remember things when they were taught for the first time. Besides, to make up for poorer vision, their other senses, such as hearing and smell, may be sharper. These highly grown senses may make them great watchers of everything around them.

Although totally color-blind people are not able to see color as we know it, their world can still be "colorful" in its own special way.

shade 陰影; condition 情況; affect 影響; sensitive 敏感的; sense 感官

48. Total color blindness means not being able to see _____.
 (A) any colors (B) the difference of some colors
 (C) bright colors (D) colors except black, white and gray

 (A) Cooking a steak. (B) Buying sunglasses.
 (C) Walking at night. (D) Exercising.
50. What is paragraph 3 (第三段) mainly about?
 (A) What makes total color blindness.
 (B) How total color blindness affects people's lives.
 (C) How to treat total color blindness.
 (D) The bright side of total color blindness.
51. What might be TRUE about total color-blind people?
 (A) They get used to new environments (環境) quite easily with their vision.
 (B) They are good at finding out any changes around them.
 (C) They remember things less quickly than others.
 (D) They have very poor night vision.

Below is what Josh wrote in his notebook.

July 20

Today Amaka took me to look for hundred pacers, which the Rukai and the Paiwan peoples respect. Amaka told me about why the Rukai respect the beautiful snakes so much. After hours of walking in the forests, suddenly we saw a Banded Krait. Its head is egg-shaped while its back has very clear black-and-white circles around it. I was so scared that I even can't move because it was my first time to see a real Banded Krait snake.

July 21

We started early so that we could come back to Rinari before dinner because we would spend more than six hours going to Kucapungane, the home of the Rukai. I was surprised at those special, beautiful stone houses at Kucapungane. There, Amaka told me about the Big Ghost Lakes, the Rukai's sacred lakes. "If you want to go there, I'm a good guide," he said. It sounds great because my friend, Mark, is studying about the lakes in the high mountains. Amaka can help him a lot.

July 22

After lunch at an amazing restaurant, I left Rinari at 14:00. What a friendly village! I'll come back some day.

- (A) (B) (C) (D)

56. Which one is the most likely (可能的) message in the email Josh wrote to Mark?

- (A) Aren't you worried about where to find a Rukai that knows the Rukai's history about the Ghost Lakes well? My guide in Rinari should be the person you need. His name is Amaka. He grew up in Kucapungane.
 (B) Aren't you worried about how to go to the Ghost Lakes? I've found a friend that can make your dream come true. He not only can take you there but can answer all the questions about them. He knows the lakes very well.
 (C) I know you're interested in hundred pacers. Aren't you worried about when is the best time to look for them? My guide, Amaka lives in Rinari. He can give you a hand. If you need him, just tell me. We can pay a visit to him together.
 (D) Aren't you worried about who you can ask about the Rukai and the Paiwan peoples' traditional stone houses? A man named Sarabu, who grew in Kucapungane, must be able to help you. He knows how to build this kind of house very well.

One day Tony was crossing the road when he was hit by a car. He fell and broke his arm. An ambulance soon arrived and took Tony to a hospital. There a doctor operated on his arm. Then he put the arm in a cast. Tony could not move it at all. "You must keep your arm in a cast for five weeks," the doctor said. "That will give the broken bone a chance to get well."

When that day came, Tony went back to the hospital. The doctor used a large saw to cut the cast. Then he took Tony's arm out of the cast. "Can you move your arm, Tony?"

Tony tried to move his arm. At first, it was difficult, but soon he could move it easily.

"Yes, it's fine," he said. "Thank you very much."

"In a few days it will as good as new," the doctor said. "Just exercise it a little."

"Will I be able to play the guitar?" Tony asked.

The doctor smiled. "Of course you will," he said. "You'll have no problems." "That is good news," Tony said happily, "because I couldn't play it at all before."
