Tokyo News 2023.02

Tokyo is a busy city with 14 million people living in it. So, it's no wonder lots of things get lost there. Tokyo police reported that people turned in about 3.4 million items in 2022. The most commonly lost item was ID cards. The police collected about 730,000 of these. They also got about 300,000 lost wallets, 390,000 cards which are used for public transportation and 320,000 pieces of clothing, including gloves. But what set a record last year was CASH.

According to Tokyo police, the total money amount that people turned in last year was $29.6 million , which is $1.1 million more than the record set in 2019. That is to say, people in Tokyo found and turned in about $81,000 dollars every day last year. In Japan, people are expected to turn in any lost money that they find .There is also a reward system for people who turn in the money they find. If someone claims money that has been turned in, the finder can get a reward worth up to 20% of the money. And, after three months, if no one has claimed the money, the finder can keep it all. But why was last year a record for cash? The Tokyo police don't think it was because people were more careless. They think it's because the COVID-19 pandemic is ending, the country changed its rules to allow more visitors. Also, many more people began going out and doing more things. So, the Tokyo police are warning people to be careful.
