二、題組。

Honeybees

It's the season for juicy watermelon, fresh strawberries, and baskets of blueberries. The next time you enjoy having them, thank honeybees. With no honeybees, it's hard to enjoy those sweet fruits. But that's the problem the scientists keep worrying about. During these years, thousands of millions of honeybees all over the world were dead, but the scientists aren't sure why.

Why are bees so important?

One-third of the fruits and vegetables need honeybees to carry pollen from one plant to another as a pollinator. If there aren't enough bees to do so, there will be fewer and fewer foods. Other pollinators, like butterflies, bats, and wind all can do the same job, but no one can be better at passing on pollen than the hardworking bees.

What can we do?

Besides scientists, you can do your part to help bees. Find an adult to help you with the ideas below.

1. Create a bee-friendly "house" in your yard, or even in a flower pot.
2. Plan your garden, so you will have flowers blooming from spring to autumn.
3. Choose those hardier plants, and then you can keep your garden chemical-free.
4. Give a bee bath. Fill a small dish or bowl with some small stones in fresh water.

scientist 科學家; pollen 花粉; adult 成人; bloom 開花;
chemical 化學物質

30. What may hardier mean?

(A) Easier to be sick. (B) Not easier to be sick.
(C) With more pollen. (D) Free of chemical.

31. Which one is NOT a pollinator?

32. Which of the following is NOT true?

(A) Bees need fresh water and healthy plants.
(B) About 30% of fruits and vegetables need bees to grow.
(C) Bees are out of danger now.
(D) Scientists work hard on how to save bees.

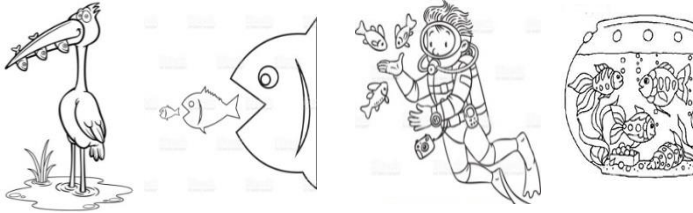

Big problems are happening just because of some small things: plastic microbeads. People usually found them in many personal care products, such as body wash. The factories add microbeads into these products to make them better at cleaning skin. After using, people also wash the plastic microbeads down the water pipes, but they're too small to be collected by the filter. Tens of billions of these pieces of plastic microbeads are going into our rivers, lakes, and seas every day. This plastic hurt the earth so much. The story doesn't end there. Most sea animals can't tell the difference between microbeads and food. That's why people find more and more dead birds with stomachs full of plastic. Some small sea animals also eat the beads, and then bigger ones eat them in turn. In this way, the plastic with harmful chemicals can end up in our favorite seafood --- and then in our bodies. Sooner or later, all humans and animals will be in danger.
