The native people of Central America invented chocolate about 2,000 years ago. They made a spicy drink from the seeds of the cacao trees. First, they dried the cacao seeds and broke them to make a paste. Then they added chili peppers and water. The chocolate drink wasn't sweet-- it was bitter.

Spanish explorers learned about chocolate when they arrived in America around the end of 15th century. They took chocolate back to Spain in 16th century. People there liked their chocolate hot with sugar and cinnamon. This hot and sweet chocolate drink soon became popular in Spain and even all over Europe. About 1847, a factory in England started making hard chocolate candy. 20 years later in 1867, a Swiss chocolate maker named Daniel Peter invented a chocolate candy made with milk. Now milk chocolate is very popular and people grow cacao trees in many places. 【綜合】

I had a dream—a strange dream. It helped me to understand Eric much better.

In the dream, Eric looked angry and said, “Melissa, I have something to tell you.” I buy him fish and milk and lots of toy mice once a week. I even bought a small house for him because he sometimes likes to be alone. I love him with all my heart, and give him all my love.

But what’s wrong? In the dream, Eric said angrily, “I don’t like fish. I don’t like milk. And toy mice? Are you crazy? I’m not a cat. And I don’t want to be a cat, either!” Then he ran back to his small house.

After the dream, I know better: dogs don’t like fish or milk. And surly they do not like mice. Most important of all, they will let you know when they are really angry.

【U1,99 基測】

36. What can we learn about Eric in the reading?
- (A) He likes cats.
 (B) He is Melissa’s pet.
