John: Alice, stop reading the news on your tiny screen. Take a look at my brand new Note 7 and its big screen. When the cellphone first came out on August 19, it was impossible to get one, but now it's here. Have a look.

Alice: Never! I don't want to be anywhere near it because it might explode. The first case of exploding was reported on August 24. The news said the company was asking for a recall. Here, take a look at this report.

John: Is this true? They started recalling all the Note 7 on September 15.

Alice: In fact, that was the second recall. The first recall was on September 2, and they said it might be a battery problem.

John: Why did this have to happen? This cellphone is very good.

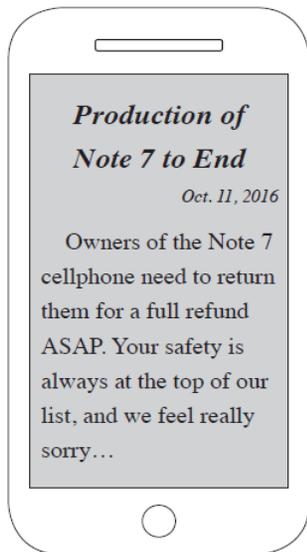

Alice: Hey, look! My news site says there's breaking news about the Note 7.

John: "Production of Note 7 to end." I can't believe it. I just got mine, and now it's history.

Alice: Yes, you'd better do that fast. Why are you still standing here?

John: I think mine is still okay!

Alice: Go return your phone now.
