There is a special woman from Pakistan, and her name is Malala Yousafzai. Her father was a teacher and ran a girls' school in their town. In her childhood, she loved school and always enjoyed her classes. At that same time in Pakistan, there was a group of people, the Taliban. They didn't care about women's education. "Women should do housework, cook at home and have babies. They shouldn't go to school." the Taliban said. They then stopped women from going to school ever again.

Malala didn't like this, so she did something about it. She wrote about her life and women's troubles in Pakistan. She told the world her story, and the world listened. The Taliban was very angry. They shot her, but she didn't die. Two years later, she won the Nobel Peace Prize. She is the youngest winner of the prize. What an amazing woman!

When I was a teenager growing up in Russia, I wanted to leave school and have my own life. I thought about working in the brick factory or getting married. I was nervous when I told my father I wanted to leave school. I thought he would say, "No! You are going to college." I was so surprised when he said, "OK. We'll go to the brick factory."

Two days later, he took me to the factory. I had a very romantic idea of working in a factory. I guessed I would have fun working. I even imagined there would be music and singing in the factory.

When we got to the factory, my father said, "Take your time. Look around." I walked around the factory looking at the building, the workers, and listening to the noise. It was horrible. I ran back to my father and said, "I want to go home."

He asked me, "What do you think of the factory?"

"It's terrible," I answered.

"And marriage is even worse!" he said.

I went back to school the next day and decided to study hard. So that I could get into a good college. I enjoyed studying English, so I majored in languages at college. Thanks to my father and our trip to the brick factory, I now work at the United Nations and my father is very proud of me. I married a very good man and my life is much better than it would have been working in the factory!

Why do people cry? Scientists say the body makes tears because they need them. One kind of tear is for the eyes; the other is for the heart. They both work as cleaners. If something else like dust gets into your eyes, tears also come into the eyes to clean it out. If you are hurt by something, your strong feelings make some poisonous chemicals in your body, and at the same time, tears come out with them. If these poisonous chemicals are not cleaned out of your body as soon as possible, they will do harm to the heart sooner or later.

In the United States men have heart problems more often than women do. Doctors say heart problems have something to do with the pressures of living and working now. Perhaps men suffer more from these illnesses because they do not cry enough. They need to cry more.

In fact, you can find many ways of reducing the pressures to keep fit. Crying is a natural one.

tears 眼淚 / dust 灰塵 / poisonous chemicals 毒素 / as soon as possible 盡快 / do harm 傷害/ sooner or later
