Tower of London: “The Ravenmaster clipped the wings of the adventurous ravens.”

-- BAC News Sep,24 2023

Two of London’s more adventurous ravens had their wings clipped to stop them from escaping. Ravenmaster Chris Skaife usually clips just one wing to protect them from busy traffic. But Chris Skaife clipped both wings of Jubilee and Branwen to prevent “upward and fast flight” to the top of the White Tower.

Rober Fuller, chief of the Tower of London, said ” The ravens are part of the Tower community and we take our responsibility for their good lives very seriously. He said: “We regularly have veterinarians to make sure they get the best care. They can not live in wild, so we have to clip one of their wings to let them stay at the tower, and then we can feed them a varied and healthy diet.”

In the London tower, the Ravenmaster usually keeps at least six ravens because according to a legend, if the ravens leave the tower, both the fortress and the kingdom will fall.

Do you know the character "Hulk" from the Marvels? Do you think he is a monster or a human being? In fact, when he is happy, he's a person like us. But sometimes he feels another emotion: anger. He doesn't like it, so he becomes a big green monster "Hulk"! He fights all bad guys. He uses his anger to protect people and save the world!

People would like to protect someone or something they care about like Hulk. But when something stops us, we get angry! Being angry feels bad, but anger can also make us stronger. We can fight better against what's stopping us. Anger can help us protect things.

Being anxious feels bad, too. We are anxious when we feel danger coming. But being anxious can be useful, too. It can help us get ready for the danger. Then when the danger is here, we are okay. For example, a big test at school can make us anxious. So, we study hard. Then when the test day comes, we are ready for it.

People have emotions. Though some emotions feel bad, they can be useful sometimes. What emotions feel bad to you? Think about how they can help you.

A teacher using Taylor Swift and TikTok in his lessons says, "children would remember those funny and relatable classes more than those boring ones." Mr. Pupils in Stevenage elementary school uses singing popular songs as a way of learning their times tables.

Mr. Brown, 25, adapted Mr. Pupils' teaching style and he hopes to inspire other teachers to do the same through TikTok. Now, he has more than one million followers on the app. Mr. Brown teaches in Peartree Spring Junior High School, and he likes to replace the lyrics of popular songs, such as Taylor Swift's, with a list of chemical elements in his class. After he shared examples of his teaching methods, he gathered a large social media following.

Mr. Brown said "Times changed. I am trying to move with the times, thinking of new ways to motivate the children and this helps me do that." He always had a passion for helping teenagers. But when he was a teenager, he had a dream of becoming a footballer, not a teacher. He was snapped up by Luto Town football school team at the age of fourteen but was released at sixteen years old. After giving up to be a footballer, he studied hard and got a part-time job in a local grocery store.

When he finished his senior high, he went to Hertfordshire University to study junior high school teaching at eighteen. "I have to keep finding new songs and looking for fun ways to attract students into learning, and make sure they have a love for learning. This is the thing I try to do in the classroom" Mr. Brown said.

"TikTok is effective for me personally. I can connect with teachers all over the world, take and share inspirations, and other practices in the classroom. "The teenagers keep me here. I have a passion for teaching and education and I don't want to go back to football anymore." Mr. Brown said.
