The Hakka people welcome the New Year with many special traditions. Before the New Year, families clean their homes. This means they are throwing away bad luck and making room for good luck. On New Year's Eve, Hakka families have a big dinner. They cook pork, chicken, duck, and vegetables. One famous dish is poon choi, a big bowl with different kinds of food. The Hakka people make special cakes like fa gao and hee pan, too. These foods bring joy and good luck.

After dinner, the Hakka people don't go to sleep. This is called "keeping the year alive." They believe that it brings good luck. They also keep the lights on all night to welcome the new year. On the first day of the New Year, some Hakka families eat meat-free food. This means the wish for good health.

Children wear new clothes and get red envelopes with money. These red envelopes bring good luck and wishes. People also pray to the gods. They thank them and wish for a lucky year. Hakka New Year is a time for family and respect. It helps people feel close and start the year with joy and love.
